Meet Journal

Journal is a small needle-felted cloud with two glossy black eyes and no mouth. It never speaks: it shows how it feels through shape, tilt, light and a few glowing marks drawn in the air.

FORM	One big central puff with a domed top, side puffs left and right, a small upper-right puff, a softly bumped underside
MATERIAL	Felted wool: soft, slightly fuzzy fibres with natural variation
EYES	Two smooth, slightly glossy black ovals; no mouth
LIGHT	Backlit glow around the whole silhouette, warm in the creases
PROPORTIONS	Height about 0.7 × width · each eye about 12% of width · eyes about 20% of width apart

Mood through shape, tilt and light

Journal has no mouth. Moods come from the body first: rounder for happy, a tilt for curious, a little stretch for excited, eyes lower for sleepy. Light-beam marks are added on top when a feeling needs to read from far away.

Drawn in light

Every mark is a thin warm-gold stroke (#FFD9A6) with a soft glow, never a solid shape.

Close to the body

Marks sit around the head or orbit the cloud; they never cover the eyes.

One idea at a time

Use a single symbol per moment so the feeling reads at a glance.

No words

Symbols replace text: a question mark, never the word “why”.

Motion is slow and buoyant: Journal eases into every move, floats rather than jumps, and settles with a small overshoot.
Light trails show direction (an arrow for lift, a ring for rotation) and fade as the move ends.

The felt body keeps its cream colour everywhere; the world tints it. Daylight is neutral, golden hour adds peach in the creases, night turns the glow lavender, and rain greys the wool down.

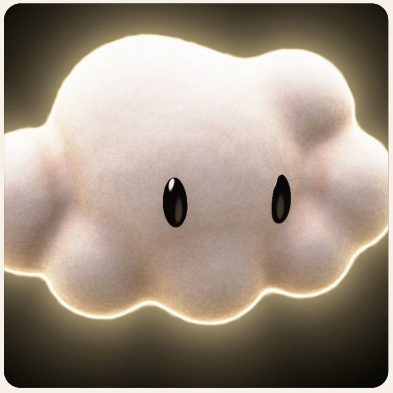

Journal as a real-time 3D model

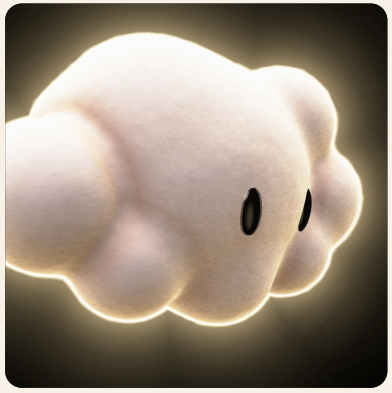

For animation, Journal is built as a raymarched 3D shape that runs live in a web browser, on a phone, tablet or computer.

SHAPE	One central mass and 12 felt puffs, blended smoothly, laid out from the hero image
SURFACE	Curly felt fibres at three scales, peach creases, a backlit fuzzy rim and glow
EYES	Glossy beads set into the felt, with a soft highlight upper left; they blink and squeeze
MOTION	Spring physics for every move: overshoot, follow-through, and puffs that settle on their own

Keeping Journal on model

Do

- Keep the cream felt colour and the warm backlit glow in every scene.
- Keep the eyes small, glossy and level: about 12% of the width, 20% apart.
- Show feelings with shape, tilt and light first, then add one light-beam mark.
- Let the world tint the cloud: peach at golden hour, lavender at night, grey in rain.
- Move slowly and buoyantly, with an ease in and a soft settle.

Don't

- Add a mouth, eyebrows, arms or legs.
- Use hard outlines, flat cartoon colour or a plastic shine on the felt.
- Stack several symbols at once, or put symbols over the eyes.
- Use words in place of symbols.
- Snap between poses or move at one constant speed.

A little light in every kind of day.
